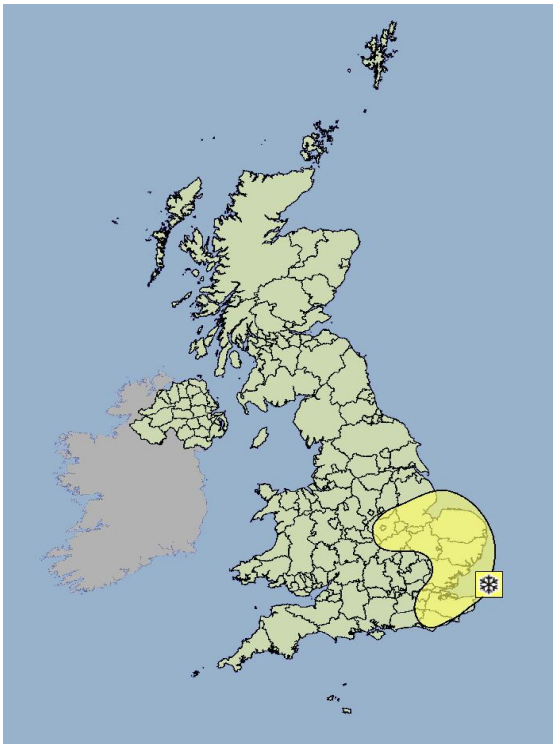
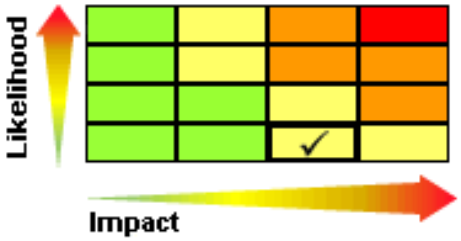
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
From late Monday afternoon, snow showers may become aligned into bands pushing into parts of southeast England. Where this occurs there is the potential for accumulations of 5-10 cm locally whilst nearby locations may see much less frequent showers and only small accumulations of 0-2 cm in places.

At this stage the development of these shower bands and the exact locations and timing of these is very uncertain.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 16:00 on Mon, 26th Feb 2018 until 23:55 on Tue, 27th Feb 2018

Snow showers may become persistent from late Monday afternoon, continuing overnight and throughout Tuesday.

There is the potential for travel delays on roads, stranding some vehicles and passengers, as well as delays or cancellations to rail and air travel. Some rural communities could become cut off. Power cuts may also occur and other services, such as mobile phones, may be affected.
